Bay of All Saints is a documentary film by Annie Eastman that captures the conditions of families who live in a community of palafitas in Salvador, Bahia. Palafitas are shacks built on stilts in the ocean bay inhabited by generations of poor families. Director Annie Eastman worked and resided in this neighborhood for 18-months. At the end of 2004 Eastman began shooting BAY OF ALL SAINTS when the families of this community were confronted by forced relocation due to a government program to reclaim the bay to restore the ecology of the bay.
